Indonesian Update 11.29.25

11.29.25

Conditions inside police detention:

- From the very beginning, this case hasn't been handled only by regular police and the Cyber Crime unit, but also by Densus 88 (the special anti-terrorism/anti-makar squad). Makar is Indonesian term for "inciting an action or planning to overthrow the government").
- Most of the arrested anarchists have already started going through trials and have been moved to Kebon Waru prison.
- Eat (Reyhard Rumbayan) still has zero info about when his trial will happen. He's the only one who's been interrogated by Densus 88 - they see him as the "mastermind" behind everything related to the anarchist stuff.
- There are basically three types of charges being thrown at the detainees: (1) the brains behind the scenes, (2) the instigators, (3) the ones who got instigated. Of course, that's because the state can't wrap its head around the idea that spontaneous actions can happen without any leader - that concept just doesn't exist in state logic.
- The anarchist detainees don't have access to lawyers. Some of them were thrown straight into solitary confinement for a month or even longer. By Indonesian law, a lawyer has to be appointed by family members. Problem is, quite a few of these anarchists don't have family willing to help. A couple who finally got family support are now starting to work with lawyers. Some lawyers are already being lined up for those who haven't gone to trial yet.

- Health conditions of several detainees are getting worse. Two people were badly physically tortured, one was psychologically tortured to the point of severe depression so bad he can barely speak, one is in critical condition and was taken to a military hospital, and Eat's health is deteriorating because they won't let him get the regular medication he needs for his medical condition.

- The initial donated money has mostly been used to cover medical treatment so far.

- Latest news: 12 anarchists were arrested in Bali and transferred to police detention in West Java.

General situation in Indonesia:

- Densus 88 has started infiltrating anarchist circles, including scenes that are considered close to anarchists, like the punk scene.

- These infiltrators are using imagery and symbols that anarchists (especially insurrectionary ones) normally use, so others will think they're legit. They're actively pushing for riots like the ones that happened last August, hoping to scoop up young anarchists who join in.

- Bad news: some of these infiltrators have actually succeeded.

- This is going to turn into a massive witch-hunt against anarchists all over Indonesia.
